In the inquiry—Which is the best Liniment for Man and Beast?—this is the answer, attested by two generations: the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT. The reason is simple. It penetrates every sore, wound, or lameness, to the very bone, and drives out all inflammatory and morbid matter. It "goes to the root" of the trouble, and never fails to cure in double quick time.

PYÆMIA

Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but not less certainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the taint of Scrofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA

Is a foul corruption in the blood that rots out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. WOMEN'S NOSES.

The Arrangement of Hair and Bonnets Should Depend on Nasal Configuration.

Before deciding as to the arrangement of the hair, the nose should be carefully interrogated. If that feature be Roman, or what a learned author describes as "cogitative"—i. e., long and curved inward to the point—the hair should be somewhat pronounced in its arrangement. It should be rather massive, or else the large nose will, by force of contrast, make the head look meager. If the nose be Greek, an approach, carefully guarded from being too realistic to the classic knot, may be ventured upon. The varieties of the Anglo-Saxon nose, some of them quite childish in their want of decision and firmness of outline, are too numerous to be specially commented upon, but should be treated variously, according as they approach the aquiline, the Greek or the snub varieties. This last requires a rather coquettish arrangement of the hair. Madonna heads accord badly with a snub nose. So does the Venetian coiffure, which has been such a favorite among our æsthetic phalanx for some years. A "little head sunning over with curls" best suits the snub "tip-tilted like a flower"; and sensible women who perforce wear turned-up noses will carefully abstain from following the height and depth of fashionable coiffures, but remain faithful to the quasi simplicity that goes so well with the infantile formation of their noses.

The silly young women who have of late gone about the world with their heads cropped as close as those of boys will now regret the rashness that robbed them of their locks. For the catogan is coming again. The hair is to be worn curled in front, then simply brushed back to the nape of the neck, where it is to be tied with a ribbonmatching the trimming on the dress; hanging down the back in short curls for evening wear, but arranged in a thick plait for the work-a-day hours. It is a style that has its advantages, more especially as displaying to good effect a plait of burnished chestnut hair, which the present mode, with its tight little basket plaits rather enviously conceals. But the catogan needs a very special neatness to commend it, and if again adopted here as it now is in Paris, it will be well for its patrons to bear in mind that when ruffled or disarranged, the queue will lose all resemblance to the exquisitely neat little appendage of the name as worn by our ancestors.

It will have its effect upon the shape of the fashionable bonnet if it becomes general, and will necessitate a lowering of the crown at the back. This portion of the popular headgear has become smaller and smaller; while in hats, on the contrary, there is sometimes an enormous preponderance of crown over brim. In the shape known as the Tam o'Shanter this is notably the case, and there was never, perhaps, in the whole history of headgear, a form that more readily lends itself to the ridiculous than this when seen upon any save the youngest and freshest of faces. A middle-aged woman, with a hard-set color in her cheeks, who should be so utterly blind to the fitness of things (and there have been such instances) as to don a Tom o'Shanter, is one of those phenomena which make one desire the revival of sumptuary laws. If the style of hair-dressing ought to be dependent in a great degree upon the shape of the nose, that of the bonnet or hat should, to be consistent, be so too. There is a very thin variety of the nasal organ, inclined to redness along the ridge, which looks sharp enough to carve with, that requires extremely delicate treatment in the matter of coiffure. The effect of the nose itself is painfully meager, and this must be counteracted by a sort of amplitude in the arrangement of the locks and in the trimmings of the bonnet. But then, on the other hand, these must not be too ample, or they will produce a contrast so evident as to be practically a reproach to the nose for its thinness. The other extreme of a very fleshy nose demands a certain severity in the bonnet; but the outlines of the latter must not be too rigid, else they will throw into disagreeable prominence the inclination of the nose toward spreading and width. So far as regards form. With respect to color, it is another matter. It is one of the most difficult tasks of the clever milliner to deal with a nose that remains obstinately red despite all the waters and washes devised for such cases. It is a sad thing to see a bunch of poppies in a bonnet, and to note that their rosy tint is precisely that of the most prominent feature in the face. Yet even this is less startling than it would be to leave surroundings dark and unrelieved by color, so that the nose, especially on frosty days, lights up the gloom like a newly painted pillar-box in a dingy street. But, fortunately, there are but comparatively few such hopeless noses as these, though one occasionally sees them and regards their owner with pity and perhaps mistrust. The ordinary English nose is white, though free from the bloodless look of the French feature. The nostrils are daintily touched with pink, and yet no color spreads further than these, even when the rest of the complexion is sensitively subject to sudden change. Such as these relieve the modiste of all difficulties, so far as color is concerned.—London Daily News.

—Some twenty odd years ago a resident of this valley sold his wife for a jug of whisky; a few days later he was presented with the wife of a man who had grown tired of her. The first woman mentioned was afterwards traded again for a cow. All hands then settled down to business and have lived in this county ever since. They accumulated a nice property, and their descendants are among the most respected people in this county.—Livermore (Cal.) Review.

—Mr. E. Matthews, of Jackson County, has a colored man living on his place who was left in the Cherokee Nation, in Twenty-nine-mile Stretch, sold twice by John A. Murrell, and shot at three times by the Confederate soldiers. He is now the father of forty-nine children and is ninety years old. He can plow as much in a day as any man.—Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

TWO MILES A MINUTE.

Wild Fowl That Could Make Loops Around the Smokestack of the Best Locomotive.

"I've held my watch on about every kind of wild duck there is," said R. W. Winans, an old time wild-fowl hunter, "and I can tell just about to the sixty-third part of a dot how much space any of 'em can get over in an hour. There's no railroad train on the continent that can hold a candle to one side of the slowest duck that flies.

"The canvasback can distance the whole duck family if it lays itself out to do it. When the canvasback is out taking things easy, enjoying a little run around the block, as it were, it jogs through the air at the rate of eighty miles an hour. If it has business somewhere and has to get there, it puts two miles behind it every minute it keeps its wings flapping. If you don't believe it fire square at the leader in a string of canvasbacks out on a business cruise sometime when you get the chance. Duck shot travel pretty quick, but if your charge brings down any at all, I'll blow you off to a pair of the best there is in the market, with trimmings and all, if it isn't the fifth or sixth one back from the leader that drops. If you have the faintest idea that you will bring the leader down; you must aim at space not less than ten feet ahead of him. Then he'll run plumb against your shot. When he drops you will find him a quarter of a mile or so on.

"The mallard duck is a slow coach. It's all he wants to do to go a mile a minute, but he can do it when it is necessary. His ordinary every-day style of getting along over the country gets him from place to place at about a forty-five-mile-an-hour-rate. The black duck is about an even match for the mallard, and the pintail widgeon and wood duck can't do much better. The redhead can sail along with ease and cover his ninety miles an hour as long as he feels inclined to. The blue-winged teal and its handsome cousin, the green-winged teal, could fly side by side for a hundred miles and make the distance neck and neck, for one can fly just as fast as the other, and to go a hundred miles an hour is no hard task for either of them. The gadwale—you don't know what a gadwale is, I'll bet! I thought not. Well, it's a duck that doesn't get East very often, but is well known in the West. It is something like a mallard, only harder to shoot, because it's not so unsuspecting as the mallard. The gadwale is something of a daisy on the fly, too, and will win money for you every time if you bet it can make its ninety miles an hour.

"Maybe you wouldn't think that a goose could almost double discount the fastest fast express train that runs on our railroads, but it can every time. I mean a wild goose. It has a big, heavy body to carry, but it manages to glide from one feeding ground to another with a suddenness that is a caution to wing shots. To see a flock of honkers moving along, so high up that they seem to be scraping their backs against the sky, you'd never believe they were traveling between eighty and one hundred miles an hour, but they are. The wild goose never has any time to fool away, and his gait is always a business one.

"The broadbill duck is the only wild fowl that can push the canvasback on the wing. Let a broadbill and a canvasback each do his best for an hour, and the broadbill would only come out about ten miles behind. A hundred and ten miles an hour can be done by the broadbill, and he, consequently, makes a mark for a shot gun that a greenhorn wouldn't hit once in twenty-seven years."—N. Y. Sun.

WOOD ASHES.

Their Value as Fertilizers Not Sufficiently Appreciated.

There are few if any fertilizers in the market that possess so many desirable qualities as good wood ashes; being rich in potash, and having a fair proportion of phosphoric acid, they supply two important materials that are deficient in moist soils. But there are other important elements that are not only beneficial, but important for plant growth. Wood ashes contain large quantities of lime; not stone lime but lime that is finer and more soluble; it having once been in a condition to enter plants, it again readily comes into a condition to be taken up by growing plants, much more so than the common stone lime. Ashes contain two other important elements, namely, magnesia and silica; these are both necessary for plant growth, and like the lime, they are in the right condition to be readily taken up by the growing plants. In fact, wood ashes being the mineral elements of vegetation, they contain all of the mineral elements for the growth of other vegetation, and that, too, in the best possible condition, because having once been taken up by growing vegetation, they have been divided into small particles and made soluble in water, and they readily return to the same condition again. This is an important fact that is generally overlooked. A fertilizer might be well supplied with importants elements of plant food, yet be in such condition as to be of no possible use to the growing plant for several years after it is applied.

If the farmer could be sure of getting pure wood ashes at the price usually charged, it would be for his interest to buy them for almost any crop he grows on his farm. While the benefit the first year may not be as much as some other fertilizers, the second, and for four or five following years, the benefit on many soils is great, The doubt about the quality has deterred many from buying ashes in large quantities. While there are some ashes analyzed worth from thirty-five to forty cents a bushel, there are others that will not analyze worth more than half as much. If some way could be devised by which the price could be fixed to correspond with the quality, to a positive certainty, the farmer would feel that he was getting his money's worth, but as long as he has to buy, as he now does, he will be very likely to think he is being cheated, when in point of fact, he is getting more value than he pays for.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

AN OLD LADY'S RECOLLECTIONS.

A Trip to Baltimore—The First Steamboat—Johnny Cake—Beaux.

[Baltimore American.]

Speaking of women, there lives in East Nottingham, a few miles over Mason and Dixon's line, in Pennsylvania, an old lady who possesses a bright memory, despite her 97 years of age. Her name is Mrs. Amelia Fulton. She was born near Rising Sun, Cecil county, Md., in 1788, and has lived through the administrations of all the presidents, from Washington down. A visitor found her in a chatty mood recently.

"During Gen. Lafayette's visit to this country in 1824," she said, "It was the custom of the girls and women of my neighborhood to wear Lafayette caps. They were generally made of calico, and looked quite pretty. No, I never rode in the cars, but have seen them often. When I was young all traveling was done in sail boats and stages. To go to Baltimore by water over seventy years since we went to Port Deposit, which at time was composed of only two buildings. John Creswell kept tavern in one, and John Reynolds a store in the other. The commander of the sail boat was Capt. Gillmore, who was a kind, clever gentleman and always looked after the comfort of his passengers. The boat was not very large and had but one apartment, and each person had to take their provisions with them. I recollect on one trip the wind was contrary, and we spent two days and two nights on the water before Baltimore was reached. The price of the trip was $2, if I remember right.

I was in Baltimore when the first steamboat was launched, and of course everybody thought it a wonderful thing. Many years ago, Charlestown, not far from North East, was a place of importance. The mail was carried from there to Rising Sun, and the carrier charged 25 cents for each letter he delivered at the latter place. Then hardly one family in ten would get a newspaper, and to receive a letter was considered a big event. Each spring and fall a fair was held at Charlestown. People from all parts of the country would flock to it and buy hats, bonnets, ribbons, shawls and other things.

When I was a girl we used to mix cornmeal and spread it on a board, which was placed before the big open fireplace, and let it bake. This we called johnny cake. In the winter evenings we did not sit down and wait for beaux to come and take us sleighing, as the girls do now-a-days. We placed three large spinning-wheels in a row, and we would sit and spin by the light of pine knots. When the beaux came we would go out and give them chairs, and I know more than one chap must have got some flax on his clothes while we were spinning. I have my wheel up in the garret now, and sometimes I feel like having it brought down stairs to rig it up and show the young folks how we made linen in my girlhood days."

A Great Wash Day.

[Paris Cor. Boston Transcript.]

We have just had a mi-careme such as Paris has not witnessed for several years. During the afternoon the boulevards were so thronged by sight-seekers that one could only move at a small space. The mi-careme is the great fete of the washermen and washerwomen. Some of your readers may ask what men have to do with the wash-tub. In France they have much to do with it. Here men claim their right to wash and scrub, just as women claim their right to vote and to shoot their enemies.

Both sexes batter your linen to pieces, burn it with sulphuric acid, and grind off your buttons in perfect amity. But on the mi-careme there is not a man nor a woman who would condescend to look at a wash-tub. In the world of soap and soda it is the day of days. Then you must expect to see your buxom laundress attired as a much decollete Juno in a cavalcade with her husband as Jupiter or Apollo by her side. In the evening the washhouses are turned into ball-rooms.

A Village Community in Russia.

[Pall Mall Gazette.]

The latest experiment in the organization of industry comes from Russia, where the employes at the large engineering works belonging to the firm of Struve & Co. have recently been planted in a complete settlement somewhat like Pullman City in the states. The workmen, of whom there are between 3,500 and 4,000, are all lodged in small cottages, most of which are made to accommodate two families only, while the public institutions of the colony include a refectory, a laundry, a hospital, a benefit society, a technical school, and a co-operative store. The employers contribute handsomely to the benefit society, but charity in any other form is quite unknown in the place, and the co-operative society pays a flourishing dividend. It would be curious if Russia, which is a survival of the past in its village communities of an agricultural type, were also to be a pioneer of the future in village communities of an industrial type.

The Art of Talking.

[Interior Monthly.]

There is not by any means a lack of talk, this is abundant. Gossip and scandal and slang we have an overabundance of, but of conversation, sensible talk, there is a sad want of that. The American people have been dubbed as a nation of talkers or rather of twaddlers, and there is much truth in the assertion, but the same may be said of almost every other nation under the sun. There are few really good talkers, men from whom in ordinary conversation you can gather a fund of knowledge, and who are entertaining as well. You need not long be in the company of a man until you are aware of his weak points. If his general demeanor does not betray him his tongue will.

Decorated with Handkerchiefs.

[Chicago Herald.]

A room at Harvard is decorated with the handkerchiefs snatched by the Harvard boys in the Blaine torchlight processions from the hands of the girls on the sidewalks.

The Expense of Dogs.

An Iowa mathematician declares that the dogs in that state eat enough to feed 100,000 human beings, but render very little service for the cost of maintaining them.

HEALTH.

The richest blessing a benign Providence can bestow upon mankind is health. The most serious calamity that can overtake us is the loss of it. It therefore behooves us all to guard every avenue leading to disease, desolation and death. Insidious, malignant fever lurks in every cesspool, in foul drains, in all decaying vegetable or animal matter and in close buildings or rooms filled with foul air. The germs of disease often float upon the winds borne from distant points and sometimes burst forth in most unexpected places in spite of every precaution. Yet, with care, forethought and prudence its virulence may be checked or its deadly march stayed.

We are led to these remarks from the fact that the rainy season is upon us and cholera and the small-pox is spreading to an alarming extent in European countries. The former has not yet reached these shores, but the latter has broken out with great virulence in Mexico. No means should be spared to prevent these terrible diseases from getting a foothold among us. Children, especially, should be the subject of our watchful care. They should not be allowed to eat green or partially decayed fruit. Symptoms of bowel complaint or throat disorders should be attended to at once and proper remedies applied; and if at all serious your physician should be called in. But as an ounce of preventive is worth a pound of cure, apply the former and lock the stable door before the colt is stolen. Let everyone constitute himself a health committee of one to put every health-menacing place in order. The late rains will cause all old garbage to decay. Therefore clean up your back yards and front ones, too, for that matter. Cart off the rubbish and see that all drains are free and clear. An excellent idea is to flush them occasionally. Spread chloride of lime in your vaults and foul spots, dress warm and keep your feet, as well as those of the little ones, dry, and watch every indication of pestilence. If this be done, the chances are largely in favor of living to a ripe old age, and the little "well springs of pleasure" that God has given man will ever be with him to comfort him in declining years.

Remember that health is the priceless jewel of man's possession. It is a treasure that gold is not worth enough to buy. The wealthiest man in the universe with lost health—suffering the pangs of a gnawing, incurable disease—would give every tithe of his millions to breathe once more the pure, sweet air of the man of health. Then to our readers we would say: Being in the possession of health, guard yourselves and your loved ones from every danger of its loss as you would the apple of your eye.

G. FRANK SMITH, one of the attorneys in the suit of Colton vs. Stanford, is bankrupt, caused by the case going against him. At the time he went into the suit as the attorney for Mrs. Colton, he was worth about $200,000. His fee was a contingent one. He was to receive 65 per cent. of all money recovered as payment for his professional services and the expenses of the trial which he was to defray. It is well known the opinion of the court went against Mrs. Colton and it took all of her attorney's wealth to pay the enormous costs which had accrued.

JESSE D. GALLAND, deputy to John R. Enos, Labor Commissioner, was severely horsewhipped by a young woman in San Francisco last Monday afternoon. She gave him over a dozen blows well laid on, and the way he danced and shrieked around the room of his Chief was a caution. The cause of the cowhiding was the perfidity of the young man, who married the other girl.

AN exchange says: "You may hide all the stars in a nail keg, hang the ocean on a rail fence to dry, put the sky in a gourd to soak, unbuckle the belly-band of eternity and let out the sun and moon, but never delude yourself with the idea that you can escape the other side of purgatory unless you pay the printer."

AGE OF PROGRESS.

The past fifty years has been an age of progress, busy life and invention, developing resources before unknown to man, which to be deprived of at this time would cut off from millions in our own couptry the employments that afford them the means of subsistence and supplies the world with conveniences that, though comparatively new, have become by use, essentials in the economy of every day life, the loss of which, now that their uses are known, would reduce to the lowest depths of poverty and bankruptcy not only all engaged in traffic throughout the civilized world, but all employed in the mechanic arts, literary pursuits, the cultivation of the soil and those who rely upon the products of the earth for the means of sustaining life and affording happiness also. The inventive genius of man has produced more in the past fifty years to ease the burdens placed upon the race than all preceding ages since the creation of the world can boast of, and the end is not yet. The list of man's wants and requirements seems as far from being filled as in the olden times, and invention, improvement and development continues at a greater rate than ever. Each new invention is but another aid to man in overcoming the many obstacles that beset him in life and enables him to accomplish that which, without the facilities afforded by the inventions of the age mentioned, would be impossible.

The utilization of steam as a motive power gave impetus to the inventive genius of civilized man, whose comprehensive mind grasped philosophic principles in nature that had hitherto remained dormant awaiting the enlightment of the present age to draw them forth from the dark recesses of superstition and ignorance, under the pall of which they had been hidden from the beginning of time.

Now, by the aid of the inventions of the past half century, the wisdom of man as compared with that of half a century ago is as a rush light or a farthing candle to illumination by gas or the electric light. And though the power of steam and the fact that the lightning of the heavens could be brought under subjection by man was then known the utilization of these great elements of power—force—was little understood and served the world to but little purposes fifty years ago, while now the power of steam as a motor has been proven adaptable to machinery of every kind, while electricity, because of its cheapness and safety, is rapidly usurping its place. And though pessimists carp at the thousands of kinds of machinery that have been introduced which enables one man, aided by steam, in many cases to accomplish the labor of scores working by hand, all men of every class are benefited in many ways.

Though all cannot become millionaires, the aggregation of capital has enabled man to build up and carry on great manufacturing establishments, construct and operate steam vessels for navigating ocean and inland waters, establish and run railroads, institute and carry out the immense mercantile ventures made possible by the facilities existing for transporting the productions of the world from country to country, and the demand of the times for an exchange of commodities. Laborers' wages have been increased while the hours of labor have been lessened one-third, education of the young has become universal by means of our public schools and colleges maintained by the Government, while the wage laborer enjoys comforts in his home that could not be afforded by the middle classes in the olden time and were considered luxuries by even the wealthy. As new machines are invented production is multiplied, wages advanced and commodities cheapened, while the demand for operatives is increased. But, notwithstanding the great strides made in the past fifty years in invention and improvement, perfection has not yet been attained, and men continue to rack their brains to supply real or imaginary deficiencies, and daily new inventions are bulletined that are calculated to still further diversify labor and supply the world with new, novel and necessary commodities for the use of man at prices that places them within the reach of the poor as well as the rich.

A DESCENDANT OF "ANANIAS."

That correspondent of the "Solano Republican," whom we raked over the coals last week, is getting it all around. The following letter having reference to the same individual and his false statements regarding this valley, has been sent to the "Republican" by one of our most enterprising and representative viticulturists;

To the editor of the "Solano Republican":—DEAR SIR: Permit me to state that all the utterances of your correspondent, who apparently roamed through Sonoma County, are totally unworthy of credit and are utterly untrue. I was not aware that any descendant of "Ananias" was still in existence, but it is interesting to know that California can at least produce one of direct lineage. Yours etc.,

J. H. DRUMMOND.

WINE AND VINE NOTES.

The new wine cellar of Wm. McPherson Hill near Glen Ellen is nearing completion.

It is estimated that the wine product of Napa county this season, will not exceed 1,700,000 gallons, less than half of what it was last year.

The wine product of the Sonoma Valley and Glen Ellen districts this year will be between 600,000 and 700,000 gallons.

The price of wine is reported to be increasing from 5 to 7½ cents per gallon in the Napa Valley.

The Viticultural Commission has made experiments as to the efficacy of yeast to start checked fermentation. The experiment proved unsatisfactory. The yeast seemed to start fermentation but had not vitality to carry it through and it again stopped.

St. Helena vineyardists having Mission and Malvoisie grapes are taking of rooting them out to make way for choice varieties.

Pure native California wines have been introduced in San Francisco in several places, where they are sold at five cents a glass. It is found to pay well.

A choral society will be formed in Sonoma by Mr. Alfred Heymanson, for the practice of choral work of all kinds, part singing, etc. For particulars address Mr. H., Sonoma Postoffice, or call at the Union Hotel parlors to-day, (Saturday), where he will be pleased to afford all necessary information.

Badger's Furniture Emporium has lately been replenished with one of the largest and most varied stock of goods ever placed on exhibition in Sonoma County. He is selling his stock at less than any other house in the county, and it would be hard, indeed, to pick up anywhere such bargains as he is now offering. If any one doubts this let a visit be made to his extensive ware rooms.

A delegation of Odd Fellows' from Sonoma Lodge No. 28, consisting of John Miller, W. P. Wilson, M. F. Turley, P. H. Vollmar, Henry Lutgens, James Albertson, J. E. Poppe, Judge Small, Wm. Trudgen, J. Schuffel, L. P. Johnson, H. C. Manuel, W. Booth and Captain Eliason, paid a fraternal visit to Napa Lodge, No. 18, last Thursday evening. They were banqueted and entertained right royally by their Napa brethren.

The cars were an hour late again last Tuesday night. This is getting to be rather monotonous. People who are kept waiting at the different stations along the route, where they have repaired in carriages to convey friends and acquaintances to their homes a mile or two from the track, are about tired of that sort of thing, and desire that the cars run on schedule time; as it will save them much valuable time and no end of annoyance.

Mr. J. R. Dickinson, a celebrated artist from the Royal Academy of London, has consented to form a drawing class in Sonoma. For several months past the gentleman has been conducting a sketching class at the residence of Mr. Boyes, Pioneer Grove, and has shown himself to be an experienced teacher. The class will be formed at Union Hall on Saturday, November 7th. Ladies and children who desire to become proficient in this art should not let the present opportunity slip by, as they may not have such another chance in a life time.

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.

A Carriage Overturned With its Four Occupants.

Heroic Conduct of a Young Lady.

On Monday afternoon last as Mrs. Schepp, Miss Etta Raschen, Miss Emily Bischoff and Freddie Raschen, two years of age, were out driving in Mr. Raschen's family carriage, the horse, when near Schellville, became frightened, and wheeling suddenly without previous warning, turned the vehicle completely over, at the same time rolling over with it. Miss Raschen, who was driving, at the instant the carriage commenced to go over, made a quick spring and escaped being caught beneath, and with rare presence of mind, grasped the prostrate, struggling and maddened animal's head and pressing it to the ground sought to prevent his regaining his feet. In the meantime the other three occupants of the carriage were underneath and unable to extricate themselves, and were calling loudly for assistance. Miss Raschen, still fearlessly and bravely continuing to hold down the struggling animal, although time and again thrown violently to the ground and terribly bruised and cut up, besought those beneath the wreck to make an effort to free themselves. At last Miss Bischoff succeeded in freeing herself and master Freddie, but Mrs. Schepp being a very large and fleshy woman, was not so fortunate.

Mart Akers, who had witnessed the accident from a field some distance away, hastened to the rescue, and while Miss Raschen still continued her struggle for the mastery with the terrified horse, Mr. Akers succeeded in rescuing the frightened lady from her perilous position. He then went to the brave girl's assistance, who cut, bruised and covered with blood, had never failed to relinquish her hold on the animal. With his help, the now well-nigh exhausted young lady was enabled to arise from her dangerous position and free her hold on the struggling horse, which she did with a thankful sigh of relief.

The great presence of mind, strength and bravery exhibited by Miss Raschen was remarkable, and she did what a great many stout men would have hesitated to have done. Had she acted otherwise her three companions would undoubtedly have been dragged to death or maimed for life. As it was, they escaped with a few minor bruises and scratches, while the fearless girl was kicked, bruised and lacerated fearfully. She was conveyed to the home of her parents and the services of Dr. Davis brought into requisition, and at present writing she is resting easy and in a few weeks will be none the worse for her self-sacrificing and heroic deed.

Little Freddie Raschen at the time of the accident was asleep and, singular to relate, did not wake up till pulled from beneath the ruins of the carriage, which was completely wrecked.

An Editor's Impression of Sonoma.

R. A. Thompson, editor of the Santa Rosa "Democrat," recently paid Sonoma a short business visit and writes as follows to his journal:

"Sonoma certainly presents an improved appearance. It has a progressive Board of Trustees, of which Mr. Attila Haraszthy is President. Messrs. H. Weyl, E. Wegner, J. Cornelius and Charles McHarvey are the other members. Last year the city tax was 40 cents on the $100, and most of the money was spent in grading and graveling the streets around the Plaza, which has been much improved. About $1600 was spent on the streets south and east of the Plaza, and as much more will be expended the coming year on the north and west sides. The city tax this year is 35 cents on the $100.

Mr. H. Raschen, proprietor of the Union Hotel, has completed a very neat public hall adjoining the Union Hotel. It is a very pretty size, is equipped with a stage and some scenery, and is altogether as neat a place for a party or public entertainment as could be desired. It opens by a side door directly with the dining room of the hotel, which is a great convenience. At the proper time, when there is a ball or party, the door is thrown open and the hall and dining room are en suite. The addition is two stories high, the upper part being fitted up for sleeping rooms. It was first opened in July of this year. It makes the hotel building very complete in all its appointments, and it is well managed under the present proprietor, Henry Raschen.

Mr. Wm. Jones has improved his place, and keeps one of the best hotels in the county. If a man stops once with him he comes again, for he has a way with him of inviting confidence, and wears well with his customers.

The INDEX-TRIBUNE is a good local paper, and is appreciated by the people and well deserves the support it receives. We had other notes of the business interests of Sonoma, but have not space for them in this issue.

A Strange Case.

[Santa Rosa Democrat.]

On Saturday afternoon Sheriff Bishop received a letter from Marshal Cook of Cloverdale, stating that a man traveling on horseback on his way from Cloverdale to the Geysers, on Sunday, came across a man in a secluded ravine by the roadside, badly cut, having ugly knife wounds in many places, which will doubtless prove fatal. From indications he had been unconscious for several hours, and that the party who inflicted the wounds left him for dead, and that after a time he became conscious. The prevailing impression in that section is that the man is one of a gang of robbers and that a quarrel occurred among them in dividing the spoils, when this man received the wounds and was left by his opponent for dead. The appearance of the man, and his story favors this version of the case. He says that the cutting was performed by his own hand for suicidial intent. Sheriff Boggs of Lake County, has just been in this section looking for some robbers who have been plundering stages, wagons, and committing other depredations in that county.

A Birthday Party.

A birthday party was given to Master Friend McHarvey, on Friday the 16th, at the residence of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. McHarvey, that being his fifth birthday. The children passed a very pleasant afternoon. After listening to some choice instrumental music by Miss Van Geldern, refreshments were served which the juveniles really enjoyed. A number of pretty little presents were made to Master Friend. The following masters and misses were present: Margaret Wikoff, Geneva McTaggart, Inez McTaggart, Clara Tivnen, Anabel McDonnell, Sadie McHarvey, Lydia Culberson, Effie McCaskie, Addie Sydnor, Delia Pauli, May McDonnel, Annie Walther, Cecilia Granice; Florence Linehan, Julie Granice, Clarence Wikoff, Charley Cheney, Willie Linehan, Clarence Cheney and Friend McHarvey.

Physicians were in Vain.

Mr. David Netter, 795 Mission street, San Francisco, Cal., writes that for several months he suffered from a severe cold and cough, which finally resulted in total hoarseness. He consulted several physicians, but obtained no relief, and then tried Red Star Cough Cure. After taking a few doses he felt better, and before he had finished a bottle he was completely cured.

PETALUMA HAPPENINGS.

[Courier, Oct. 21st.]

Five deer were killed on Sonoma mountain last Sunday. Jerry Lafferty brought in one which dressed nearly a hundred pounds.

Frank Adel, for many years a constable and policeman of this city, died on his little farm near Forestville in this county on the 13th inst.

Fred. Purrington, John Tupper and W. F. Shattuck killed nine deer on their trip up the coast. Tupper was ahead with a splendid five-point buck and a bear that he didn't get.

S. S. Noble died in this city last Thursday, aged fifty-three years. The deceased was a native of Missouri, and came to California in his younger days and before he had attained his manhood.

Potato digging has commenced, and in consequence Chinamen are increasing on our streets, waiting for contracts. We predict that they will have to work at lower rates this year than usual.

A child in this vicinity recently died from eating wheat. He was only three and a half years old, and it is supposed ate about a small cupful of wheat. Being a delicate child, of course this constipated his bowels and it was five days before a passage could be obtained. When it was done sprouted wheat passed. Just before death a bunch the size of a walnut was thrown up by the little sufferer.

Last Sunday morning Michael, the little seven-year-old son of J. J. Tobin of this city, was drowned in a well near the house on Kentucky street in which his father lived. It appears from evidence before the Coroner's jury that his father was trying to get a board that had fallen into the well and little Mike, who was watching him, leaned too far over, lost his balance and fell into the water. It is said that the well was about sixty feet in depth and there was about twenty feet of water in it.

J. L. Gist of this township, left at our office yesterday a double-tailed lizard which is a curiosity. The lizard is a little over twelve inches in length from head to tail. Has four legs, a brown back with white cross stripes and drab under its body. It has a tail about six inches long, and about two inches from the end the tail divides and from that on it has two perfect tails. When killed it was coming towards Mr. Gist and licking its tongue out like a snake. It is supposed to be poisonous.

HEALDSBURG ITEMS.

[Enterprise, Oct. 17th.]

Over $2,000 in wages was paid to hop pickers in the Bailhache tract this season.

Last Sunday night frost nipped the tender shoots of grapevines considerably in the Russian River Valley.

Those grape men who have not disposed of their grapes are in luck this time. Common wine grapes have advanced to $25 per ton. "Better late than never."

On Saturday last Moulton & Co. sold E. J. Jones' place of 482 acres to Col. Thos. Hovenden of San Francisco, the consideration being $14,000. It is the intention of the purchaser to sub-divide the tract into small ranches.

Two of our society gents were recently overwhelmed and astounded by the presentation from a druggist of bills for two gallons of coal oil. It seems that the father of the young ladies in the case objected to the unusually large increase in the consumption of midnight oil, and expected the bills to be presented to the boys. They paid them.

Last Friday a visitor to town was rather astonished to see a young man emerge from Daly's and commence vigorously hugging a female form which stood in the doorway. Watching him for a moment, a look of disgust was seen to creep over his face as no answering embrace came and it was seen to be one of the dummy models which he was wasting his caressess upon. Such incidents do not argue a superabundance of young ladies in Healdsburg.

PERSONAL.

Mr. J. H. Seipp is up from the city on a short visit to relatives and friends.

Miss Emma Hope has gone to Napa to remain during the winter months, where she will continue her course of studies in elocution.

Arthur Landsborough, a young gentleman well-known to our valley people, left for South America this week. He goes to Portland, Oregon first, from whence he will embark by sailing vessel for his destination. May good luck attend him.

John Lewis, who went to Florence, A. T., a short time since, accompanied by Mrs. L., for the benefit of his health, is said to be improving rapidly. John's many friends here will be pleased to know this.

Chas. J. Poppe, the enterprising merchant of Glen Ellen, was in town Wednesday.

Mr. Wm. Martin of San Francisco is visiting his mother, Mrs. James Martin of this place. He will return in about two weeks.

SANTA ROSA NEWS.

[Daily Democrat.]

Joseph Ingalls killed an Albino fawn at Pine Flat, in this county, on Friday last. It was of a pure white color and had pink eyes.

Officer Mead arrested O. S. Munn on Saturday for being drunk and using profane language. Recorder Hoag released him on a $50 bond.

While attempting to alight from a spring wagon, in Bennett Valley, Sunday, Mrs. Peter Rickliff fell and sustained a fracture of the right arm, below the elbow.

Edward Pitts was arraigned in Justice Brown's Court on Saturday, on a charge brought against him by Mrs. Hewitt for beating her little five-year-old girl. He was fined $50 and discharged.

Luigi Migliore, the publisher of the Italian paper "Echo de Santa Rosa," is still lying in a very critical condition in the San Francisco hospital. His friends in this city entertain but little hopes of his recovery, and say unless he recovers the paper will probably not be published again.

There is on exhibition at Captain Grosse's office, a bunch of second-crop June apples, some of which are nearly of full size. They are ripe and good for eating. He also has several kinds of second-crop pears, one of which was as good a specimen as the apples, but the other variety is much smaller. They were all grown on O. A. Taylor's ranch, at Mark West creek.

SONOMA, OCTOBER 24, 1885.

TO AN EAGLE.

On me the sun has set, the low lands lie
Dim in the purple folds of early night,
But thou, gray cruiser of the chartless sky!
Dost steer thy slow, undeviating flight
Full in the sun's unclouded glare,
The world is bright around thee, thy strong breast
Parts flashing streams of keen, ethereal fire;
Aslant the ardent splendors of the West,
On still, curved vans thou mountest ever higher
Through scintilating zones of air.

From what far quest through the white gates of morn,
Beyond the peopled East, returnest thou?
Toward what sheer, solitary mountain borne
In the primeval wild art voyaging now?
Thou haunter of unbarriered space!
I watch thee soaring up the steeps of light,
Half doubting thou art ought of mortal birth,
Foredoomed to hunger, weariness and blight
And wintry change of this controlling earth,
Like our slow-footed, wingless race.

Aloof in lone, aerial equipoise,
The roar of inextinguishable strife
Melts round the like a faint, unmeaning voice,
And to thy sight the myriad maze of life
Is but a blurred, phantasmal scene.
Away, strong soul! thou leavest time and death,
Dishevelled grief and hollow-chested care
To crawl the dim, abysmal world beneath,
Whilst thou in deeps of golden dusk dost fare
Far through the measureless serene.

PICKPOCKETS' METHODS.

When a mob of pickpockets start out to "work a crowd" on a train, they break into twos. The operator on leather "fans" his intended victim. This, in plain English, means that he ascertains the location of his victim's money. He gets alongside of the man whose pocket is to be picked, and with rapid movement he dextrously passes his fingers lightly over every pocket. His touch is so delicate that it enables him to locate the boodle, and to ascertain its character, whether a roll, a purse, or a pocketbook. The surging of the crowd, especially on a crowded railway train, accounts to the suspicious traveller for the occasional jostling which he receives. It is found that the most common receptacle for the pocketbook is the left trousers pocket, front. When the victim is selected, one of the brace of thieves plants himself squarely in front of him, while the other plants himself squarely in front of him, while the other crowds up behind him on the right side. The operator in front, under cover of a newspaper or a coat thrown over the arm, feels the pocket, and, if the victim is a stiff-necked or a straight-backed man in a standing position, he finds the lips of the pocket drawn close together. In this case it is dangerous to attempt the insertion of the hand. A very low-toned clearing of the throat, followed by a guttural noise, is the signal for his pal to exert a gentle pressure upon the victim's right shoulder. This is so gradually extended that the traveller yields to the pressure without knowing it, and without changing the position of his feet. This throws the lips of the pocket open for the operator in front, who does not insert his hand and attempt to draw the book out, but works on the lining. He draws it out an eighth of an inch at a time, without inserting his fingers more than half way.

Should this process of drawing the contents of the pocket to its mouth be felt by the victim, another low clearing of the throat gives the sign to the confederate, and the game is dropped. If the victim's suspicions are not aroused, the pickpocket continues at his work of drawing the lining out until the roll of bills, the purse, or the pocketbook is within reach of the deft fingers. It is then grasped between the index and middle finger and gently drawn out. The successful completion of the job is indicated by a gentle chirrup, like the chirp of a canary, and the precious pair separate from their victim to ply the same tricks on the next one.—Philadelphia News.

"Will you miss me when I'm gone?" sang Alfonso in the parlor. "No!" fiendishly whispered the old man to himself around the corner of the house; "and I'll try not to miss you while you're going," he added, as he cocked his gun.

"The chain of evidence against the prisoner is very strong, and, it is thought, will hang him," read Mrs. Fogg to her husband.

"Gracious me!" responded the old man, "I never thought the poor fellow would be chained to death; and they call this a century of progress."

TRAVELING.

The Benefits Resulting from Change of Surroundings.

As a boy is pleased with a whistle or knife, and in youth finds delight with either a horse or a bicycle, so in manhood come the change of taste and ambition. The pleasures of twenty are outlived at thirty, and at forty we are looking through the tunnel to the light at the other end, and not until very much older, I believe, do we long for the lost days of boyhood.

The years that seemed slow in passing at twenty go by like fast coaches before forty, and startle us like a night express at fifty.

The longing to keep young is an average desire in so many, that one who could tell of a land where youth is renewed would be hailed as a leader with a splendid following. And yet, to one inured to bleak and inclement climates, a simple change to the milder weather of Southern Missouri, Kansas, New Mexico or California, will work wonders in the renewing of youth.

An air bath by travel and a new surrounding, provided one is employed and contented, is one of the surest means of reviving lost energy and increasing vitality. The wine-like winds of travel—for nothing is so much like it, in stimulating vigor, as the swift draughts of air one inhales by contrast of climates—is of all things intoxicating to the senses. We feel the world is larger, we know the earth is beautiful, and of all things to the debilitated, travel is the key to happiness.

Travel breaks up our narrowness, enlarges our love of enjoyment, increases our belief in improvements, revives our recollections and enlarges our views of others. It does more. It adds a new life to the old one, and brings to the newer the right to live over the other, and fulfills the longing to be a boy again, for travel in a strange and romantic country is to begin life anew; and settling for a season in some fair valley ("where the smile of the Creator is crystalized on the landscape"), or in some city of refinement, is a world that before was undiscovered.

As an aid to conversation and a theme of general use in business or pleasure, it is broad and instructive; as a means of learning history it is beyond all books, maps and teachers; for acquiring knowledge it is a rare experience. "He is a wise man who has known many men, seen many cities."

The influence of travel on reading, love of learning and general advantage over information gained in books, need not be urged to enforce its meaning. We all know that the more one learns the more he will learn, and a fact once outlined of fields well known will outlast all descriptions.

From the chances of trade and the changes of business, we often meet men and women who have seen better days, whose ample fortune once afforded the luxury of ease and comfort. Notably is this true of the once wealthy planters at the South, who have lost in the vortex of commerce, and the tide of affairs, the means that had furnished many a feast of enjoyment, whose present chief solace is the fond recollection of what was theirs so long in reality and is now only cherished in memory. From these we may learn that next to our nearest friendships will ever be the gain and profit of strange lands visited, fortunes enjoyed and fond scenes remembered.

And what, after all, is life but a little journey in a strange land, with a few companions, less friends, a flying train, a halt at the little stations, a rest and a recollection of what we have seen, known and enjoyed most as we traveled, even though they may be unpossessed of like impressions and surroundings.

The chief gain of travel is that means of making one at home with the many classes of associates who read from the start that one of easy manners has at least some superior knowledge of the world. Then, too, the pleasures of contemplation must ever be a source of companionship, and one that has traveled many miles with attention will have a mind well stored with natural paintings and pleasant places to recall at leisure and enjoy when alone.

The enlargement of the mind on seeing the growth of great cities, the progress of vast improvements in mechanism and arts, with the still greater wonder at the works of nature as seen in rivers and mountains, valleys like Harper's Ferry and the Yosemite, falls like Niagara, the grander sights of the Yellowstone, are all themes to contemplate, enlighten and inspire. Books and paintings can never wholly define them.—J. W. Donovan, in Current.

African Currency.

The African traveler, Oskar Lorenz, found in the Sahara on rocks rude engravings of the elephant and rhinoceros, showing that these animals must at one time have existed along with men where all is now desert. At Timbuctoo he remarked that it is not etiquette to eat fish although the river abounds with them. At the same city the two rival indigenous systems of African currency come into collision—salt and cowries. The history of the cowrie trade is very curious. To remedy the scarcity of the native circulating medium enormous importations have been made from the Maldive Islands and Zanzibar. The exchange averages 4,000 cowries to a dollar. The traveler bought an ass for 29,000 cowries, and as they each had to be counted, he needed all the patience of his beast.—N. Y. Post.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS

The invigorating and tranquillizing operation of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is most powerfully developed in cases of indigestion. The first effect of this agreeable tonic is comforting and encouraging. A mild glow pervades the system, and the nervous restlessness which characterizes the disease is abated. This improvement is not transient. It is not succeeded by the return of the old symptoms with superceded force, as is always the case when unmedicated stimulants are given for the complaint.

From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. PIERCE thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all
